

Press Release

PTS Consulting EMEA, September 2010:

PTS Consulting (UK) Ltd granted approved Endorser status under the European Code of Conduct for Data Centres

PTS Consulting (UK) Ltd (PTS) is now an official Endorser of the European Code of Conduct on Data Centres.

This demonstrates that PTS is supporting the aims of the Code of Conduct to improve the energy and cost efficiency of data centres across Europe.

As an Endorser, PTS can now offer independent advice and guidance on the Code, to assist clients to become Participants of the scheme. Participant status signifies that the clients' Data Centres are being operated to a recognised level of energy efficiency, in line with the Code of Conduct best practice. This shows a commitment to energy and cost savings in operation. Once organisations reach Participant status, PTS can also aid them with putting into practice the recommendations of Participant Guidelines and best practices.

The Code of Conduct is European voluntary initiative to improve energy efficiency; it creates a forum for industry, experts and Member States where an open and continuous dialogue on market, product and system performance takes place. Through the Code of Conduct ambitious standards and commitments are set.

Barry Lewington, Principal Consultant Data Centres, EMEA, PTS Consulting said: "PTS is recognised as an industry leader in data centre best practice. Data Centre energy efficiency and cost control are two of the key challenges facing today's business leaders. PTS is committed to driving efficiency in Data Centre design and operation and is pleased to be recognised to be supporting the standards set by the European Code of Conduct."
